

Pellervo Economic Research PTT - Applied economics and analysis

Pellervo Economic Research is an independent applied economics research institute and a registered non-profit organization. Our research is policy-oriented and focuses on five key themes: Globalization and regional development, Food, Forestry, Housing, and Welfare. A notable characteristic of PTT is its ability to investigate these issues from the perspective of regional economy.

Our mission is to advance public discussion and to assist both public and private decision-making. Throughout our 40 years of existence, we have dedicated ourselves to promoting balanced development of the national economy. Our vision is of Finland as an innovative country in which decision-making is based on knowledge produced by reliable research.

Our research staff consists of ca. 20+ economists in three research teams: Forest Management Research Team, Agrifood Research Team and National Economic Research Team. PTT has a long track record in high-quality applied economic research. Our teams publish their findings in many formats, whichever suits best the research, its purchaser and its public: as research reports, working papers, publications, academic journal articles, slideshows, web applications - even as podcasts.

Twice a year, we publish short-term forecasts combining international, domestic and regional developments and detailed forecasts for the agricultural, food, forest and wood sectors. In addition, once per year we publish a short-term forecast for the regional housing markets.
